What CPAs Can Do for a Business

More than Taxes

Proper tax compliance is important for every business. You can depend on CPAs for taxes and so much more.

Licensed

All accountants have training, but only CPAs are licensed. CPAs must pass a rigorous exam. But that's not all. They keep current by taking continuing professional education classes. Some CPAs go on to earn qualifications in specialties such as personal financial planning, business valuation and forensic accounting.

Professional

As licensed professionals, CPAs are bound by a code of ethics. CPAs must comply with government regulations, avoid conflicts of interest and keep confidential information, well, confidential.

Strategic

If you're starting a business, a CPA can advise you if it's in your best interest to rent or buy equipment, hire staff, or even change locations. As your business expands, the accounting, financial and tax issues become more complicated. A CPA can help.

Connected

Many CPAs are members of the New York State Society of CPAs, the first state accounting association. Membership is a mark of commitment to the profession.

Meet the CPAs

Real Members. Real Careers. How NYSSCPA Membership Helped.

We asked,

“How has being an NYSSCPA member helped your career?”
Here’s what they said, in their own words.

Richard T. Marini, CFO, Albany

I've been an NYSSCPA member since I was first certified. Being a CPA and having membership in the CPA Society gives me instant credibility, if I talk to anyone else or apply for another job. I've found it's something people notice, and it adds to your reputation.

Rosemarie A. Giovinazzo-Barnickel, Retired Sole Practitioner, Staten Island

Being a Society member has given me the opportunity to develop some amazing friendships. It has also generated business opportunities for me. Other members knew I had developed a specialty area, and they would contact me with client opportunities. I never advertised my firm—all my clients were obtained by word of mouth and referrals from Society members.

Frank J. Giambruno, Sole Practitioner, Hauppauge

The first thing is networking with colleagues. We bounce ideas off each other, which is especially helpful if you're a sole practitioner. Another benefit is CPE—a lot of good courses at the chapter level, committee level and statewide level. Being a member has also led to client referrals.

Lori Jansen, Senior Audit Manager, Pittsford

Serving at various levels of chapter governance has provided valuable experience, with regard to leadership, teamwork, planning and organization governance.

Tracy L. Badgley, Partner, Newburgh

The Society introduced me to volunteer leadership positions. Today, I serve the Mid Hudson Chapter as a board member, and I chair two committees. The Society has proven to be a wonderful way to meet other CPAs. We learn that we are not so much competitors as we are business colleagues who support each other—especially on the Society's popular online Exchange. The Society introduced me to the COAP program as a way to support community youth. COAP has proven to be one of my favorite and most rewarding ways to give back. Without being a member of the State Society, I would have missed out on many important relationships that have helped shape my career.
